I am currently re-designing the Design Demons web site, its been two years since touching the old flash site so something needs to be done. I have been lucky in that most of the work I have been doing has been through word of mouth and so the need for an all singing and dancing portfolio site hasn't really been there.

I do have quite a bit of traffic coming off the sites I have designed so a new design and a rethink of all the services I provide is always a good idea.

Its not easy designing your own site, I find other peoples sites alot easier to do for some reason.. I have been locked away for sometime now and haven't had much of a life since I started this project, its the best way though, I want to get it done by the new year.

Spending time on my own site has taught me new things as does every site I make. I have been looking further into SEO and finding new tips and tricks along the way, once the site is finished I will be looking at improving my poor Google rank of just two.

My main keyword is "web design" which scores a difficulty rating of 72%, I have challenged myself to get this site on the first 2 to 3 pages. Which considering the 1000's of other web design sites out there will be tough.
