

```
if (document.addEventListener) { document.addEventListener("DOMContentLoaded", window.print(), false); } // for Internet Explorer (using conditional comments) /@cc_on @/ /*@if (@_win32) document.write(""); var script = document.getElementById("__ie_onload");
script.onreadystatechange = function() { if (this.readyState == "complete") { window.print();
// call the onload handler } }; /@end @/
```

What is a Web Designer?

Posted by: admin in web designers , web design sites , web design , SEO , myblog , keyword development , development

, Design Demons

, Design Demons

on

Dec 8, 2008

It seems a lot of us are web designers these days. Through the development of the internet technology it has made web site design easier for everyone to have their say. We use online web design templates, we blog, we review, we have our own MySpace and Facebook web pages. It's all good, the more information out there the better, so is the need for clean web designs that stand out from the crowd with quality of content rich pages.

I have followed web trends over the years and I admit to having made some lovely flash animation web sites (including the last Design Demons web site), which look great if your audience sticks around to see it, but doesn't deliver the raw content and information that we are hungry for in today's climate. We know what we want and we know within half a second if we want to stay on the particular web site just clicked on.

